Dear Dr Chakrabarti,

I am writing regarding the manuscript submitted to the ILR that was entitled "Employment Shopping: An AI-Driven Universal Job Allocation Model for Inclusive Workforce Integration".

Following careful consideration, we regret to inform you that it is not possible to process further the paper for publication in the ILR. While the proposal is innovative, the analysis could have engaged in a more original way with the literature in this area. In addition, the structure of the paper is not amenable to the type of research articles that are published in the ILR. If I may, I would advise you to submit the paper for publication in a journal that focuses more on issues of interest to professionals in public and private employment services.

I understand that the news may be disappointing but we look forward to receiving other papers you may wish to develop in the future in the areas of work and employment.

Regards,

Aristea Koukiadaki

Academia AI and Applications

Dear Dr. Chakrabarti,

We are reaching out to invite you to review a manuscript for Academia AI and Applications.

 Generative AI and Academic Integrity in Online Distance Learning: The AI-Aware Assessment Policy Index for the Global South

by Sixbert SANGWA, Ph.D. and Placide MUTABAZI
 Academia AI and Applications

Abstract: &nbsp;&nbsp;&nbsp;Background: Generative artificial intelligence (AI) is transforming assessment and academic-integrity practice, yet most online and distance-learning (ODL) universities in the Global South must navigate this disruption with limited resources and acute equity concerns. Purpose: Guided by sociotechnical-systems theory, neo-institutional isomorphism, and value-sensitive design, the study synthesises the emerging landscape of AI-responsive assessment policy and interrogates its implications for integrity, inclusiveness, and epistemic justice. Design/Methodology: A secondary-data meta-synthesis integrated 70+ peer-reviewed articles, global policy reports, and 50 institutional documents released after 2022. The team created the AI-aware

Peer Review Invitation from University of Sussex on Novelty

The screenshot shows a Gmail interface with a search bar at the top containing the text "label:university-of-sussex---novelty-assessm". The left sidebar lists various email labels, with "University of Sussex --..." selected. The main content area displays an email with the following details:

- Subject: Reminder: Invitation to join the Metascience Novelty Indicators Challenge
- From: The Metascience Novelty Indic... (University of Sussex - Novelty Assessment Survey)
- Date: Thu, Feb 26, 10:23 PM (4 days ago)
- To: Kallol Chakrabarti

The email body contains the following text:

Thank you to those who have either completed the survey or emailed us.

If you have not yet completed the survey, the UK government's Metascience Unit and the University of Sussex are still keen to receive your expert assessments on the novelty of selected publications.

We have matched your work (Synergizing Biology, Technology, and Culture: A Framework for Bio-Integrated Smart Rural Development (DOI: 10.31219/osf.io/twyk3_v1)) as relevant to at least one publication in our project, which we would like you to assess. If you feel the publication(s) in focus is not actually in your area of expertise, then you can tell us this within the survey.

Sharing your expertise is quick (the median time is 6 minutes), and is crucial to our research project. Your responses will be combined with those of other experts to create a major repository of novelty evaluations at unprecedented scale. Findings will be presented only at the aggregate level and will help inform the development of policy on research evaluation. We hugely value your contributions via this personalised link.
